Best 3rd Year Paper Prize 2018 --- Highlights

- The third-year paper represents a key milestone in a PhD student's academic career. Each year the student with the best third year paper will be awarded the CEMFI Best Third Year Paper Award. All papers submitted for the fulfilment of the third-year paper requirement, except ones jointly written by a member of the PhD student's committee or another faculty member, will be automatically considered for the prize. The winning paper will be selected by a committee organized by the PhD Directors.
- For the 2017-2018 academic year, there were two third year papers by Jose Gutierrez and Siqi Wei
- The selection committee, which was formed by Nezih Guner and Diego Puga, decided to award the prize to Jose Gutierrez. The statement of the committee was:

"The Committee decided to award the 2018 Best Third Year Paper to Jose Gutierrez for his paper "Capital Requirements for Off-Balance-Sheet Exposures: How do They Affect Real Economy Through Credit Lines?." The recent crisis made financial regulation a key issue for researchers and the policy makers, with a particular focus on capital requirements. The existing literature, however, almost exclusively focuses on capital requirements on traditional bank loans as opposed to credit lines. Yet, credit lines constitute a significant part of all commercial and industrial loans. The paper by Jose Gutierrez develops a nice framework to study capital requirements on credit lines and how such regulations can affect financial stability and investment. The Committee thinks this a carefully done paper on an important question and has the potential to be an important contribution to the literature."
- The prize was presented in the Opening Ceremony of the academic year on September 24th, 2018.
